Representative Tom Burch Files Public Reporting Bill of Healthcare Acquired Infections.

"Currently, the state requires hospitals only to report outbreaks and has no standard definition of what that means. Hospital officials said they do report what they believe are outbreaks — beyond the normal number of cases — and no MRSA outbreaks in hospitals were reported to the state last year." View Bill

Kansas City Star: Facility Fees Day 2: 'Facility fees' add billions to medical bills

"It doesn't make sense," said Kevin Kavanagh, a retired surgeon and chairman of the patient advocacy group Health Watch USA. Either hospitals are making extra money by charging facility fees, or they're operating far less efficiently than a doctor's office can, Kavanagh said. In either case, facility fees "are extremely expensive to the health care system." The fees may be one of the primary factors driving physicians out of private practice and into hospital employment, Kavanagh said. "You can't compete against an entity paid almost twice as much as you are."
